This timeline is part of a packet of materials available from the American Library Association, developed to celebrate the freedom to read. The annual proactive celebration, Banned Books Week, provides the opportunity for libraries, bookstores, and schools to conduct or sponsor positive educational programs, including readings, forums, discussions, plays, and films, demonstrating the value of free expression. The packet includes a 200-plus page resource book, containing press releases, publicity ideas, bibliographies, and sample programs; reproducible materials, and posters, and is available to libraries, bookstores, and schools for $10.
